

FEAR

Black night was upon us, Howl of the outcries deafening the sailors Clouds gathering over the crew, and circling our ship
Blinding our eyes, but there before us,

A massive hurl of water,
Like animal, with the soul of its own
Drowned the ship
Thunder roaring with temper.

Hell of darkness shadowed us
Water rose from the sea,
A whirlpool lifted the ship to its highest Murmurs of the wind that filled our ears
Lightning struck through clouds at different directions
Sea unleashed its fury
The devil was at his work
Hope deserted every soul
